Students, schools and free speech in the age of the Internet.

October 24, 2011

Saint Joseph College

Facebook, Twitter, texting and blogs have created new dimensions to student expression both inside and outside of school. They have also brought a slew of court cases that are redefining students' free speech rights and their limits. Join us for a free, half-day forum as we explore three First Amendment cases in an interactive, mock trial format moderated by Martin Margulies, professor emeritus at the Quinnipiac College School of Law and a cooperating attorney for the ACLU of Connecticut.
